Spring 2017 IAC Meeting

On February 23-24, the Department of Petroleum Engineering held the Spring 2017 Industry Advisory Council meeting. In addition to the IAC meeting, the council was invited to attend the IAC banquet and had the opportunity to interact with current students in the program. The Petroleum Engineering Education and Training Center brainstorming Workshop was held on the afternoon of February 24th and the group had the opportunity to discuss and plan future methods to train the next generations of energy experts.

IAC Banquet and Awards

Following the IAC meeting on February 23rd, the industry members had the opportunity to interact with students at the evening banquet. Matt Jurgens from Zarvona Energy was the keynote speaker and provided students with insightful advice for their future paths as Petroleum Engineers. The evening concluded with an award ceremony announcing the 2017 SPE Denver Scholarship recipients.

Visit from SPE’s 2018 International President

SPE’s 2018 International President, Darcy Spady, was on campus February 6-7, 2017 and gave a wonderful presentation sharing his experiences in oil and gas. He also had the opportunity to tour a few facilities on campus including the new Collaborative Energy Complex building, the Core Library, and the Energy & Environment Research Center (EERC).

We are proud of our dedicated students who attended the spring break field trip to Williston, ND. The drilling class had the opportunity to tour a rig and experience the classroom in real life. Thanks to our Industry Advisory Council Chair, Jeff Kummer, McKenzie Energy Partners LLC for hosting the rig tour.

Various short courses will be offered on UND campus in the new Collaborative Energy Complex building. UND Petroleum Engineering has teamed with Schlumberger Network of Excellence in Training (NExT), as the leading oil and gas training provider to offer industry short courses including Geomechanics Applications in Shale Gas, Petrel Fundamentals, and Petrel Geology.
